ST JAMES, THE APOSTLE

25th July will be of particular significance to me this year. It is the feast day of St. James the apostle, brother of John and patron saint of Spain, where he is supposed to have taken the Gospel before returning to Palestine and execution by Herod. In May, Jane, Ingrid McIvor and I joined a pilgrimage led by Canon Philip Banks from the cathedral at Bury, which is dedicated to St. James, to Santiago (Iago is James in Spanish) di Compostela in N.W. Spain, walking the Camino Ingles (the English Way). Compostela is the third most visited Christian site after the Holy Land and Rome; thousands still make the journey every year. Watch the film "The Way" to get a flavour of the route from the Pyrenees, an arduous five week trek, which makes our 80 miles over six days seem very relaxed.

I am not convinced by the story that, after his death, friends of the saint took his bones in a rudderless stone boat until it landed on the Spanish coast, nor that some of those bones are in the casket under the altar of the cathedral at Compostela. Nevertheless, when the crowds had dispersed and for a few moments I was alone in front of the casket, I felt deeply moved by the knowledge that I share the same name and the same faith as the saint, and that like him, I have been called to follow and serve the same Lord. I too lose my temper, am impetuous and slow to understand the Gospel.

I can't report a Damascus road vision or an audible word from God; I didn't burn my clothes at Cape Finisterre ("end of the earth") as many pilgrims do in token of starting life afresh; I didn't come to any dramatic decision. What I hope did happen was that I let go and let God more than I normally do. How? Each day's walk required me to trust in the yellow arrows and the scallop shells (the pilgrim's symbol to be seen on most statues of St. James) that mark the Camino. I had no map and no real idea of what lay in store, making my appreciation of my surroundings that much sharper. Walking necessitates travelling light and it frees the mind to savour the presence of God in the natural and human worlds through which we travel.

As we talked with our companions on the Camino, it became clear that most of them were experiencing the same and that they too had things they needed to let go. Side by side conversation can explore depths not usually reached by routine social or domestic chat and it was a privilege to be trusted by others and to trust them in return, respecting one another's dual needs both to unburden and to share in silence.

I am very thankful to my companions and to Philip for his excellent leadership and administration. They would all acknowledge, however, that pilgrimage happens daily in Suffolk for all of us, that God is just as present in all our journeys here, and that we have good travelling companions at hand. So, thank you too, fellow pilgrims of the Carlford benefice, as together we let go and let God.

"Do not walk before me, I may not follow; do not walk behind me, I may not lead; but walk beside me and be my friend".

Monday House Group Grundisburgh

Following our June meeting the group is now on its summer break. We shall gather together again at the meeting in September, which will be informal and open to all, to look forward to knowledge we hope to gain in the coming months.

This is not a group that seeks to delve deep into a few subjects, but rather to broaden knowledge and grow understanding of the faith we hold and the church we support.

Do join us.

Dates and times will be in the Grapevine.
