"Pub Church – wherever next?"

On a very wet morning in October, 15 of us, aged between five and 80+, were greeted in the Moon and Mushroom at Swilland with tea and coffee. It happened to be a Sunday, but it could just as easily have been another day and a different time. The pub was open for business and customers came and went while we sang, prayed, discussed, read the Bible, newspapers, and poetry, and shared time with each other and with God.

I don't know what impression it made on the staff and those having a drink at the bar, but I feel certain that it was just as genuinely church as the more traditional harvest festivals at Otley and Grundisburgh the same morning. Everyone contributed something and we all learned from each other, leaving with an enthusiastic "let's do it again."

Jesus promised his disciples that he would be with them to the end of time. His incarnation and life on Earth were a visible presence of God with us – Emmanuel. We can go even further and say that God is in us, present in you, me and the whole of creation as Holy Spirit.

That being so, then any attempt to confine God to a building, a liturgy, a day of the week or a particular group of people will fail. Jesus would not let traditions or boundaries restrict where he took the gospel – as his church, as the people of God, nor should we.

This is what lies behind "Fresh Expressions of church" and "Lightwave". The former has been around for several years and the latter is the project led by Sally Gaze, Charlotte Cook and others that is developing from its base in Otley College.

We are already involved – pub church, village war memorial church, Messy Church, Christmas nativity in a barn, farmyard harvest celebration, country walk rogation, house church, house group – we've got them or done them somewhere in the benefice. A coffee-morning or a community-lunch are just as appropriate as a sung Eucharist in church to share the gospel, fellowship and God's gift of salvation.

Seen in that way, we can be and do church anywhere at any time. Meeting with and worshipping God need no appointment or formality. They happen daily in countless workplaces, at kitchen sinks, on mountain tops, in factory canteens, prison cells, village halls, and sitting rooms, around hospital beds. Pub church, Fresh Expressions and Lightwave projects do not diminish but complement the traditional Sunday service in the church building. It is pub church not church in the pub, and if it refreshes parts and/or people that traditional church doesn't reach, then let's have more of it.
